IF NEWLY-ELECTED ISRAELI GOVERNMENT HOLDS TIGHT REIN THIS COULD BE BOOM YEAR, SAY EXPERTS

The Israeli economy, according to non-Government experts, remains lean and stable. If the new Government is able to hold a tight rein on wages and prices, 1966 could be the best year since the "boom" of 1963.

Banks like to advertise the security they provide, and Israeli banks are no different. One such institution, however, recently coupled this guarantee with a thought that was on many Israeli minds, reports the New York Times: "I let other people worry about devaluation scares and whether prices will rise," a relaxed fisherman said in the advertisement. "I don't worry — my money is safe . . . because I get high interest (5.4 per cent) or linkage."

His colleague in the ad did not appear to be entirely convinced, and neither are many Israelis who have a nagging suspicion that the Government will follow its 1962 devaluation with another adjustment. The talk is of five Israeli pounds to the dollar rather than the present three-to-one ratio.

But the Government has insisted that there will be no devaluation, and most economists agree. The adjustment, if any, probably will come in the form of greater export incentives and premiums on imports.

Israel's economy last year was in better condition than the devaluation talk would indicate. In fact, the $525-million trade gap was expected to be narrowed by about $50-million and the hope is that it will shrink in a few years to about $250-million.

In general, last year was more sobering than satisfactory. The growth rate continued roughly at a ten per cent level, not much of an improvement over 1964 and about half the rate of the 1962-63 period. But it is still one of the highest in the world.

It was a year, too, of a major decline in the stock market, of spiralling wages and rising prices. And it was an election year, which added to the instability, although the return of Premier Levi Eshkol to power enabled economists to breathe a sigh of relief.

The man in the street who once yearned for goods he saw only in advertisements in foreign journals now can find the products in shop windows, says the New York Times. They may have enormous taxes (a television set with installation costs about $1,000), but they are available.

He knows there is a huge military bill to pay — nearly fifteen per cent of all resources — and that a country with nearly no natural resources, scant energy sources, and few really large industries must pay a high import bill to keep the economy going.

To some Israelis the statements about their nation's economy resemble the colored glass in the bottom of a kaleidoscope — turn the tube and it produces one pattern, turn it again and you get a different picture.

For example, the nation might be the envy of many as far as its state of foreign currency reserves is concerned: It has about $750,-million, an amount that could keep the economy going for quite a while, and this figure has been rising at the rate of about $150-million a year.

But where does it come from? Most of the money is in the form of German reparations to individuals, who are encouraged officially to keep their foreign funds in the bank with the lure of high interest rates. Unofficially, they are keeping them there more and more as the rumors of devaluation spread.

Financier Was Benefactor, Gave Treasure To Musuems

Harry G. Friedman, former president of the General American Investors Company, Inc., 60 Broad Street, and a leading contributor to the Jewish Museum, Fifth Avenue and 92d Street, died in his home at 2 East 86th Street, New York. His age was 83.

Although Mr. Friedman held a Ph.D. in economics from Columbia University, he preferred not to be called Dr. Friedman. He was a founder of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies, having been secretary of the founder's committee for seven years before January 10, 1917, says the New York Times, when it was incorporated as the Federation for the Support of Jewish Philanthropic Societies.

Mr. Friedman had been a trustee of the Jewish philanthropic group since 1916. Chairman of its distribution committee from 1930 to 1940, he also was a former secretary and was on its finance, executive and building committees.

Mr. Friedman gave the Jewish Museum many historical, artistic, and cultural collections. Starting in 1941, he donated art objects of the 17th, 18th, and 19th centuries that were associated with Jewish religious observances.

In 1957 he presented to the museum and 18th-century Torah crown of rare design. In 1960 the

Bad Effects Of N. Y. Transit Strike On Garment Trade Are Long-Range And Far-Reaching

The economic impact of the recent New York transit strike is now being felt across the country and is expected to be felt by businessmen there long after the strike was settled.

"The long-range effects on New York of the strike, I feel, will be much worse than the immediate effects," Mark Richardson, executive vice president of the New York Chamber of Commerce, said to Robert Alden, of the New York Times. "With New York manufacturers unable to fill orders, out-of-town merchants are turning to manufacturers in other cities to supply them. Once they've got their foot in the door you can be sure those manufacturers will try to hold onto the business."

Sidney Prince, executive director of the United Better Dress Manufacturers Association, confirmed that out-of-town retailers, fearing that they will be caught short in their spring line, have been canceling their orders in New York and reordering from manufacturers in Chicago, California, and Florida.

New York supplies two-thirds of the women's clothes in the United States and a little less than half of the men's garments. According to experts in the field, out-of-town manufacturing facilities are not now capable of filling the nation's needs.

There are empty racks in stores across the country. The S. S. Kresge Company, of Detroit, said that delivery of garments to its 123 stores was "seriously disrupted."

Trucking lines reported that the pickup and delivery situation in Manhattan had deteriorated so badly because of traffic conditions that buyers everywhere in the United States were feeling the effects.

A spokesman for the Commerce and Industry Association said that with each passing day the situation grew increasingly worse, says the New York Times. He said that the plight of the workers who get paid by the hour could only be described as "calamitous" or "catastrophic."

However, a spokesman for one garment manufacturers' association said that 75 per cent of all the workers in New York's midtown garment district had not been reporting for work and that he suspected that many of these relatively low-paid, piece-goods workers had stayed at home by preference to collect unemployment insurance benefits.

Many small-businessmen in the five boroughs applied for loans from the Federal Government's Small Business Administration. Businessmen in midtown and lower Manhattan who were not able to reach the Small Business Administration's offices were referred to the Lower Manhattan Small Business Development and Opportunity Corporation, 80 Fifth Avenue, near 14th Street, reports the New York Times. The corporation is a community action project supervised by the Small Business Administration.

"It is apparent that the textile and garment business was hard hit," Julius Hernandez, executive director of the corporation said. He reported, however, that requests for aid were received not only from retailers and wholesalers, but from professional people as well.

ANTI-SEMITISM IS NOT RIFE IN U.S., SAYS A.D.L. MAN OF SOVIET CHARGE

While the Soviet Union continues its campaign to tell people abroad there is no anti-Semitism there, it is telling its own citizens that anti-Semitism is rampant in the United States. Izvestia, the government newspaper, in a recent article written from New York by Sam Howman, reports the New York Herald Tribune, said: "Intolerance (in the United States) is revealed not only to Negroes and to other 'colored' people. Another form of racial chauvinism — anti-Semitism — is getting stronger."

Mr. Howman then writes about hate groups existing in the United States and the literature they publish. He apparently used as source material for his article a book he identified as "Some of My Best Friends" by Benjamin Epstein and Arnold Forster.

The Izvestia article quotes the authors, both top officials of the Bnai Brith Anti-Defamation League, as claiming that in 46 states of the United States 700 clubs in 1961 would not admit any Jews and that one-third of the hotels (presumably in those states) would not receive Jewish guests.

Izvestia quotes the book as saying that in New York one-third of 175 apartment co-operatives will not sell to Jews. "The same goes for Philadelphia, Los Angeles, Cleveland, and other cities," the article says.

Mr. Howman added: "In spite of the fact that Zionists serve the dollar faithfully and truly, one could often see on the walls of synagogues and prayer houses black swastikas; hear outbursts in holy places and the noise of broken glass."

The article talks of a case in Miami where "a certain Donald Branch" . . . "openly declared during proceedings that he was a member of a Nazi party and that his wish was to kill at least four Jews."

It talks of cemetery desecration in Atlantic City, vandalism against synagogues in the Bronx and anti-Semitic demonstrations in Los Angeles, says the New York Herald Tribune. "I could have told many other facts," Mr. Howman says. "But even those that I brought up are sufficient to explain that America is a country of racial intolerance not only toward the Negroes but also to other minorities."

Tass, the government news agency, quoted the Soviet Yiddish-language magazine Sovietish Heimland as saying that a monument would be built at Babi Yar in Kiev "as a reminder of Fascist atrocities." Babi Yar was the site of a 1941 massacre by Nazis of tens of thousands of Ukrainians, Jews, and Russians.

In New York, Mr. Epstein, national director of the Bnai Brith Anti-Defamation League, said the article was evidently based on events that happened prior to 1962, when "Some of My Best Friends" was published.

The swastika daubings referred to, he said, apparently took place in December, 1959, and January, 1960, when anti-Jewish desecrations in Cologne, Germany, spread throughout the world, including the United States, where about 1,500 cases were reported in those two months.

"There have been only a few sporadic synagogue and cemetery daubings since then," Mr. Epstein said.

"Discrimination in hotels has dwindled to a minimum since the book came out," Mr. Epstein added. "Only two per cent of resort hotels investigated by the League recently practiced discrimination

The marriage of Miss Betty Zinman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Issie Zinman, 5742 Wilderton Avenue, to Irwin Itzkovitch, son of Mrs. Goldie Itzkovitch, 4577 La Peltrie Street, and the late Joseph Itzkovitch, was solemnized at Beth Ora Synagogue, on Sunday, July 4, at six o'clock, by Rabbi Morris Halpern, assisted by Cantor Samuel Taube. The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her white, peau de soie gown was embellished with lace appliques; and styled with a square neckline, short sleeves; and slim skirt with a detachable train. Her tulle illusion veil was topped by a seed-pearl-beaded crown; and she carried a prayer book with white orchids. Mrs. Norman Holtzman, sister of the groom, was matron of honour, in a pink, beaded, peau de soie, sheath gown. She had a matching crown; and carried a bouquet of pink carnations. The bridesmaids were: Mrs. David Zinman, sister-in-law of the bride; Mrs. Hersh Gordon, Miss Rosalind Kirshenbaum, and Mrs. Irving Feldman; cousins of the bride; Mrs. William Zinman, and Miss Rosalind Sugar; each wearing a pink, peau de soie gown, made with a beaded bodice. They had rhinestone tiaras; and cascade bouquets of pink carnations. David Zinman, brother of the bride, was best man. The ushers were: Irving Feldman, and Hersh Gordon; cousins of the bride; Saul Gotthelf, and Norman Holtzman, brothers-in-law of the groom; and Joseph Ivers, nephew of the groom. White, and pink carnations, roses, gladioli, and chrysanthemums were the wedding flowers. There was orchestra music. Three hundred guests were received. Mrs. Zinman, mother of the bride, wore a sleeveless, beaded gown of shocking-pink peau de soie, the slim skirt of which was made with a back panel. Her hat was the same shade. Mrs. Itzkovitch, mother of the groom, wore a pink, sleeveless, peau de soie gown which had a beaded bodice; round neckline; and slim skirt; also a flowered headpiece. Their flowers were corsages of white orchids. Mr. and Mrs. Irwin Itzkovitch spent their wedding trip at the Nevele Country Club, in Ellenville, N. Y.; in New York; and Atlantic City, N. J.; the bride going away in a pink, silk suit; with a corsage of white orchids. They have taken up residence in Waterloo, Quebec. Here for the marriage were: Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Ivers, brother, and sister-in-law of the groom, and sons, Joseph, Jerry, and Stanley, of Los Angeles, Calif.; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Brines, of New York, uncle, and aunt of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. Louis Telmer, of New York; and Mr. and Mrs. Hersh Gordon, cousins of the bride, of Toronto, Ont.

Social Notes — Montreal

Mrs. Henry Spevack, 4915 Montclair Avenue; and her sister, Mrs. Herbert Caplan, 5608 Westluke Avenue; were luncheon hostesses to seventy-five guests, at Desjardins Restaurant, to honour Mrs. Spevack's daughter, Miss Terri Spevack, prior to her marriage to Lawrence Weil, of Miami, Florida, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Weil, of Cleveland, Ohio. Mrs. Spevack wore a grey, knitted suit, worked with silver-coloured, metallic thread; and had a corsage of yellow roses. Mrs. Caplan wore a coral-coloured, ribbon, knitted dress; with a corsage of white carnations. Miss Spevack, wearing a white, silk suit, made with a lace bodice, had a corsage of pink Sweetheart roses. The table was decorated with pink, and white roses, carnations, and gladioli. Mrs. J. Monson, aunt of the bride, of Ottawa, Ont., was here for the event.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold H. Adeland, of Montreal, gave a Pidyen Ha'Ben with one hundred guests present, at their home, in honour of their grandson, Zebulun, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Golomb (nee Donna Carylle Adeland), of Pittsburgh, Pa. He is also the grandson of Dr. and Mrs. Milton W. Golomb, of Pittsburgh; great-grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Herman; and of Mrs. Rose Adeland; all of Montreal; and of Mrs. E. Katz, of Pittsburgh. Godparents are Mr. and Mrs. Semon Gerald Jacobson, of Halifax, N. S., uncle, and aunt, Charles Herman, great-grandfather, held the baby during the ceremony. Out-of-town guests were: Mr. and Mrs. Semon Gerald Jacobson, and daughters, Carrie Eta, and Marla Beth; Mr. and Mrs. David N. Jacobson; all of Halifax; Dr. and Mrs. Milton W. Golomb, and their daughter, Mrs. David Simon; all of Pittsburgh; and Henry Herman, great-uncle, of Detroit, Michigan.

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Rudner, 5246 Globert Street, were luncheon hosts to sixty guests, at Stage Coach Inn Restaurant, to celebrate the sixteenth birthday of their daughter, Paula Maureen; sister of Lawrence John Rudner; Merle Evelyne, aged fourteen years; and Bonnie-Jo, seven; granddaughter of Mrs. Rebecca Cohen, 5245 Globert Street, and the late Joseph Cohen; and of Mrs. Annie Rudner, 5355 Jeanne Mance Street, and the late Ben Rudner. Mrs. Rudner wore a blue, peau de soie dress; with a corsage of yellow roses. Paula Maureen, wore a blue, wool dress; with a bouquet of pink Sweetheart roses. A white, and blue birthday cake, combined with white, and pink roses, pom-poms, and carnations, centered the table. Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Zuckerman, and Barbara, Joel, Julie Beth, and Diane, cousins, of Southfield, Michigan, were here for the event. That evening Mr. and Mrs. Rudner were at home to sixty guests. Mesdames Max Sivkin, A. Freed, and A. Rozalinsky, aunts, assisted in serving the beverages.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Singer, 4680 La Peltrie Street, celebrated the bar-mitzvah of their son, Richard Allan, who was called to the Reading of the Law, at Shomrim Laboker Synagogue. He is the brother of Audrey, aged eight years; and Marla, three; grandson of the late Mr. and Mrs. Myer Gurman; and of the late Mr. and Mrs. Louis Singer. Kiddush was observed. Mrs. Singer wore a pink-lavender, knitted suit; with a matching peau de soie hat. Audrey wore a turquoise-blue, velvet dress. Marla wore a red, and white, wool dress. The same evening Mr. and Mrs. Singer were hosts to two hundred and twenty guests at a dinner dance in the Synagogue hall. The hostess wore a beaded, white, peau de soie gown. Audrey wore a white, peau de soie dress; with a flowered head-band. Marla wore a white, organza dress, with red smocking; and trimmed with lace. Those who lit candles beside the family were: Marvin, and Jonathan Gurman, twin brothers; Robert Gurman, Mitchell Gurman, Murray Karachinsky, Lee Singer, Harvey Zalcman; all cousins; Allan Millstein, Edward Newman, Jerry Shaffer, Lionel Greenberg, Donald Gibson, Harvey Leshinski, and Louis Burgos. The above sat at the head table. The bar-mitzvah boy made a speech. A centrepiece of red carnations, and white pompoms, and a red, white, and gold-coloured cake, beautified the table.

SPECIAL EVENTS

Being a Compendium of Hindsights and Forecasts designed to let us know where we've been and where you're going!

FEBRUARY 1966

1 Tu HEART MONTH. Also, in commercial circles, Frozen Potato Month; no frozen potatoes at The "G", where Grossinger's COLLEGE WINTERSESSION is in its 16th Day!

2 W GROUNDHOG DAY. Get Smart! Arrange to see your shadow at Grossinger's, where 6 more weeks of Winter can be a lot of fun. The matchless Outdoor Ice Rink is a daily invitation to enjoy Skating and other Ice-events arranged by Olympic Champ Irving Jaffee.

3 Th 1945—Roosevelt, Churchill and Stalin met at Yalta. History might have been happier had they met instead at The "G", where everything happens for the best!

4 Fr Grossinger's COLLEGE WINTERSESSION in 19th day.

5 Sa More holidayers than ever are skiing on the Grossinger slopes. Shlomo! And Feb's first Saturday Show starts the month in high gear . . . with the high excitement of GRETCHEN WYLER!

GRETCHEN WYLER

6 Su Annual LINCOLN PENNY VACATION starts (thru Sun., Feb. 13th). Plus The COLLEGE WINTERSESSION. What a parlay for pleasure!

7 M 1650—First Coffee House opened in London; 50 years later London had 3000 Coffee Houses . . . but no beatniks.

8 Tu 1586—Mary, Queen of Scots, beheaded. Girls lose their heads in much happier way at The "G."

9 W 1870—U. S. Weather Bureau founded; still can't find a way to please everybody; but the forecast is great for combined LINCOLN HOLIDAY and COLLEGE WINTERSESSION at Grossinger's.

10 Th 1763—French and Indian War ends with France surrendering to England all of Canada (except Quebec and part of Montreal).

11 Fr 1847—Thomas Alva Edison born this day; revolved in his grave on Blackout Day, November 9th, 1965.

12 Sa 1809—ABRAHAM LINCOLN born this day. Some folks have been celebrating the event since last Sunday at The "G."

13 Su Both COLLEGE WINTERSESSION and LINCOLN WEEK end today. Gonna seem mighty quiet around here for a few hours.

14 M VALENTINE'S DAY! (Isn't it always, at The "G"?)

15 Tu 1898—Battleship Maine blown up in Havana harbor, giving U. S. chance to liberate Cuba; who'd ever dream such a friendship would be Castro-ated?

16 W 1868—Members of a social club called "The Jolly Corks" form Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. The two-legged kind that is; 4 legged Elks lost all their teeth.

17 Th 1817—Baltimore introduces gas street lamps. Jennie Grossinger would love you to see what Ski-pro TONY KASTNER has done with our SKI VALLEY...more fun than ever!

18 Fr WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY CELEBRATION begins at The "G", to continue until Tues., Feb. 22.

19 Sa SINGLES' CORDIAL PARTY sparks a Five Day Festival of Fun, Food and Frolic presenting, among others, BOBBY RYDELL... GEORGE KIRBY...and so much, much MORE!

20 Su 1792—First comprehensive Postal Law passed by Congress. Took 5 days to get a letter to Grossinger's from N.Y.C. Now you can get from L.A. to The "G" in 5 hours!

21 M 1888—First telephone directory published in Hartford, Conn. listed 50 numbers; Grossinger's alone has more numbers than that, not counting a thousand extensions!

22 Tu 1732—GEORGE WASHINGTON born this day. 1966—10th Annual CONNECTICUT/LONG ISLAND School Holiday begins today (until Feb. 27th). School's out! Fortunate kids will have a great time at The "G"... we've arranged to take their parents off their hands.

23 W 1905—First Rotary Club formed; seems we've been going around in circles ever since.

24 Th Henri Landru, French "Bluebeard", guillotined for murder of 13 fiancees, after swindling them; nobody can say he married them for their money!

25 Fr 1913—Income Taxes by Congress as result of 16th Amendment.

26 Sa 1815—Napoleon escaped from Gibraltar.

27 Su 1930—Elizabeth Taylor was born this day. Turned out to be one of our very favorite guests!

28 M BACHELOR'S DAY (Ugh!)

"JEWISH" ANIMALS

By Irene Jacobs

"Jewish people really don't like animals." So often, over the years, had I heard these words that, even in face of the attachment of my family and myself to our several Tibbies, I realise that subconsciously I had come to believe them.

Recently, however, I visited a British resort, where resides a lively coterie of Jewish people, amongst whom I number several friends. The weather was bleak and wet. Not with a gentle English drizzle, but marked by heavy purposeful downpours. Nevertheless, I was everlastingly accompanying dogs on walks. Dogs who owned my friends.

First, a daily fifteen-minute outing with a small golden Pekinese who, upon meeting me, established immediate supremacy with a rapid bite of my finger, innocently extended to her in trustful greeting. This I was told, alas too late, was her customary acknowledgment of newcomers although, I was assured she had the sweetest of natures.

Later in the morning came an hour's brisk promenade with a boisterous Dalmatian, whose welcome was to knock each visitor flat on his back and lick his face, in sheer adoration of the human race. After all, he knows that some of a dog's best friends are Jews. His owner looked at him lovingly as the current recipient of the dog's affection slowly picked himself up and wiped his face.

Cooing appreciatively, for a moment my friend was able to forget the tremendous worry looming ahead. The dog-sitter had not yet confirmed her ability to attend that evening and, in her absence, the planned visit to the theatre must be cancelled. "The dog is so sensitive," intimated my friend, "it simply wouldn't be fair to leave him alone; would it?"

In the afternoon, I engaged in an eventful expedition with two Great Danes who dragged their owner and me along at a spanking pace. They were much too valuable to be allowed to run unleashed. "Of course," I ruminated ruefully whilst swerving to avoid a perambulator, "only humans are expendable."

Prior to our walk, and whilst momentarily our backs were turned, these lovable creatures had diligently devoured their way through a large wrapped loaf, a huge wedge of butter, a packet of sliced cheese, a dish of gefilte fish, and quantities of silverfoil wrapped chocolate cakes. Not a trace was left of the food or wrappings, apart from an indiscreet licking of chops by the Great Danes.

"Oh," sighed their owner fondly, "sometimes they are so naughty, but one can't really be cross with them, because they seem almost human."

Her words evoked an atmosphere, and my mind flashed back many years. I was in the kitchen of my mother's house. It was a dark, wintry afternoon. In the grate the fire crackled cheerfully, and already the wine-coloured repp curtains were drawn, making the room a glowing haven of warmth. Paper-thin sheets of lokshen-to-be hung suspended to dry, and long before the appearance of the chickens, the special bowl reserved for cleaning poultry was produced and placed upon the well-scrubbed white deal working-table.

Immediately upon sight of this bowl, our cat Tibby jumped onto a chair, and sat gazing in bright-eyed expectancy. To a knowing cat, the bowl's appearance heralded forthcoming titbits of raw chicken; such delectable morsels as the Parson's nose. (Interesting thought in the case of a kosher chicken, should it read: "Rabbi's nose?").

My niece, aged six, in puzzled fascination watched this display of feline omniscience and, as the chickens were carried in, turned to my mother, saying solemnly: "Grandma, is Tibby a Jewish cat?" No, I reflected, Jewish people don't like animals — they love them.

COULD BE ISRAELI BOOM YEAR

Before devaluation talk, sixty per cent of the reparations had been converted annually. Now the conversion rate is about twenty-five per cent. Thus there is about $300-million to $350-million in foreign currency reserves held by individuals, one-third to one-half the total foreign reserves.

The trade gap is being offset with German reparations to individuals, which total $134 million; private investment in Israel, $130-million; borrowing abroad, such as Israel Bonds, $100-million; property brought in by immigrants, $100-million; donations such as those through the United Jewish Appeal, $50-million, reports the New York Times; direct gifts to Israel institutions, $40-million; reparation to the Government, $20-million, and United States food surpluses, $10-million.

museum received from him a rare silver 18th-century menorah, or traditional seven-branched candelabrum, made in France and believed to be the finest known specimen of its type.

Mr. Friedman graduated from the University of Cincinnati in 1904 and received his doctorate at Columbia four years later. He started his career as a statistician with the old United States Labor Bureau. Later he specialized in studies of gas and electric rates and was employed by the United States Tariff Board.

Entering the investment field after World War I, he was with Case, Pomeroy & Co., and Selected Industries, Inc., before joining General Investors in 1931. He was named president in 1955 and retired four years ago, remaining as a consultant and director.

Mr. Friedman also contributed widely to other museums, and was a benefactor of the American Jewish Committee, American Jewish Historical Society, the Joint Distribution Committee and Jewish Theological Seminary, says the New York Times. He leaves two brothers, Howard and Charles; and two sisters, Miss Ruth Friedman, and Mrs. Estelle Berg, all of Cincinnati, Ohio; and three grandchildren.

"I had a dentist on the telephone today," Mr. Hernandez said.

The range of such emergency loans is $1,000 to $15,000. They must be repaid in three years at 5½ per cent interest.

In Washington, Senators Jacob K. Javits and Robert F. Kennedy had announced jointly that a Federal grant of $221,436 had been made by the Office of Economic Opportunity to speed the processing of applications of small business loans in the offices of the borough presidents.

In New York, Charles H. Kriger, the administrator of the small-business loans, said that he had conferred with the city's major banks and that they were prepared to cooperate with those who had suffered economic loss because of the transit strike, reports the New York Times. Such cooperation will come, he said, both on a direct basis and in participation with the Small Business Administration.

Mr. Kriger suggested that persons needing loans go to the bank where they keep their accounts. "We are reasonably sure they will get good service there," he said.

The plight of the dentist who telephoned to Mr. Hernandez is not untypical of the plight of the professional. Piano teachers said that most of their pupils were canceling their lessons. Normally crowded doctors' waiting rooms were empty.

Small businesses with fixed rentals, and employee payrolls to meet, were in straits as the strike continued.

A woman who runs an East Side greeting card shop took in 25 cents on a day when sales are normally $200. A locksmith, employing two workers, paid them for the week, but found that nothing was left in the cashbox to take home to his own family.

A cafe proprietor in Harlem said that the strike had cost him $500 a day. And neighborhood stores across the city reported that empty pay envelopes had cut their normal retail sales from 25 per cent to 80 per cent.

The over-all assessment of business in the city by the Commerce and Industry Association is that it had never been so poor since the days of the Depression in the early nineteen-thirties.

In financial circles, it was reported that out-of-town bank and brokerage houses were experiencing serious delays in completing transactions with New York.

Despite the financial losses to the municipal government, Mario A. Procaccino, City Controller, said that all of the city's essential financial obligations were met. The weekly regular payroll checks were mailed, says the New York Times. The city's debt obligations are up to date. On January 1, the city paid out $15-million in principle and $1-million in interest.

143 Israelis Are Teaching In U. S. Jewish Schools

Over sixty of the 143 Israeli exchange teachers now in the United States serving in 72 Jewish schools of all types, Reform, Conservative, and Orthodox, as well as all-day schools and Yiddish schools, attended the annual conference for the exchange teachers in New York, sponsored by the Department of Education and Culture of the Jewish Agency for Israel.

In the nine years since its inception, 942 Israeli teachers have participated in this program sponsored by that Department and the American Association for Jewish Education. The Israelis teach in the United States for periods from one to three years. Apart from the values in any cultural exchange program, this teachers' exchange program has also helped to meet the shortage in trained teaching personnel in the American-Jewish educational field.

The Israeli Consul General in New York, Michael Amon; Mrs. Rose L. Halprin, member of the Executive of the Jewish Agency; and Dr. Samuel Blumenfield, U.S. director of the Agency's Department of Education, spoke, and the teachers attended an all-day seminar addressed by American and Israeli experts on "The Place Of The Israeli Teacher In The American Jewish School."

Guest speakers included: Dr. Ephraim Shmueli, Israeli writer and lecturer, who is Visiting Professor at the Cleveland Institute of Hebrew Studies; Jacob Litman, of the American Association for Jewish Education; Yaakov Morris, representative in the U.S. for the Treasury of the Jewish Agency; Albert Elazer, superintendent, United Hebrew Schools, of Mich.; Samuel Lichtiger, principal, Elementary Division of the Flatbush Yeshiva, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Samuel Steinberg, director, Midrasha Institute of Jewish Studies, of Essex County, Newark, N. J.; and Gad Cohen of Israel, now serving in the U.S. as consultant to the Department of Education.

against Jews", reports the New York Herald Tribune. Mr. Epstein said also there is less discrimination at clubs nowadays, but could give no specific figures. The Izvestia writer, said Mr. Epstein, "cannot be talking about things that happen today."

"It is clear that what he has done is to put together incidents that happened over a period of time to create the impression that these conditions exist today."

Mrs. Samuel Budovitch, 143 Charlotte Street, Fredericton, N. B., was hostess to forty guests at a tea, for her daughter, Miss Sandra Gail Budovitch, and the fiancee of Fred Isaacson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Isaacson, of Berlin, New Hampshire. Pink roses, and white, and red carnations adorned the table. The marriage will take place on July 3, at Sgoolai Israel Synagogue, in Fredericton.

Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Velensky, of Fredericton, N. B., visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Wasserman, 3251 Fortieth Street, Ville St. Michel, Montreal, Quebec.

Dr. I. K. Lubetsky, 6721 First Street, Halifax, N. S., was made honorary president of Oakfield Country Club at the annual shareholders' meeting and was presented with an illuminated scroll. In 1963, as vice-president, he succeeded as president John H. Lloyd, when the latter became a member of Parliament in July of that year, and continued in office for two years until he retired, leaving an eighteen-hole golf course, and doubled membership. He is a professor in the department of oral surgery at Dalhousie University; past president of Halifax Chapter of Alpha Omega Dental Fraternity; founding member of the School of Dental Medicine of the Hebrew University of Jerusalem; was president of Baron de Hirsch Synagogue in Halifax, for a ten-year period; is past president of the Y.M.H.A.; and the Halifax Zionist Council; past chairman of the United Jewish Appeal and Israel Bond Drive; past master of Keith Masonic Lodge; member of Bnai Brith Lodge; Halifax Canadian Club; Halifax Board of Trade; Halifax County Dental Society; and the Nova Scotia Dental Association.

In Montreal, Quebec, for the marriage of Dr. Eva Deutsch, daughter of Dr. Leon Deutsch, and Dr. Mina Deutsch, 2038 Norway Road, to Dr. Frederick Andermann, son of Mrs. Anny Andermann, 4700 Cote des Neiges Road, and the late Adolf Andermann, at Chevra Kadisha Bnai Jacob Synagogue, were: Mr. and Mrs. David Shepherd, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Babb, and Mrs. J. M. Franklin; all of Saint John, N. B.

Mr. and Mrs. Julius Litwin, of Campbellton, N. B., visited their son-in-law, and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Issie Farber, 300 St. Aubin Street, Montreal, Quebec; and are spending the winter in Miami Beach, Florida, where they went via Eastern Air Lines.

Shaar Shalom Synagogue, Rabbi Isaac Freeman: Mesdames L. B. Ferguson, 1650 Robie Street; S. H. Newman, 6350 Almon Street; and Aubrey Shane, 5830 Inglewood Drive; were hostessess at a dessert luncheon, at the home of Mrs. Newman, for the donors of the tea and sale, 1965 project of the Women's League of the Synagogue. Mrs. Michael Levine, 5860 Inglewood Drive, poured the beverages. Mrs. Nathan Green, 864 Robie Street, is president.

CLASS IN COOKERY

four large potatoes
one tablespoon flour
two tablespoons cold water
two eggs
one-half teaspoon baking powder
one teaspoon salt

Grate potatoes in cold water. Drain off all the liquid through a fine sieve. Add the well-beaten eggs, flour, salt, and baking powder. Then add two tablespoons of cold water and blend well. Pre-heat frying pan and drop mixture by spoonfuls into melted fat. Brown pancakes well on both sides. Cook until done. Serve hot with applesauce.

Mrs. Stephen Steinman,
406 Ninety-Fifth Avenue, Chomedey, Montreal.

PUFFED WHEAT CANDY

one cup of corn syrup
one cup of water
juice of one lemon
one box of puffed wheat
one cup of sugar, brown or white three tablespoons cocoa

Mix ingredients thoroughly, except for the puffed wheat. Cook them in a pot for twenty minutes or until mixture thickens when a little is placed in a glass of cold water. Pour mixture over the puffed wheat and mix thoroughly. Place contents in an oiled pan. Cool, and cut into squares.

Mrs. Bessie Sternberg,
958 Shaw Street, Toronto.

MARRIAGES

KAUDER-LEFLER

The marriage of Miss Laura Lefler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elie Lefler, 55 Viewmount Avenue, to Ronald David Kauder, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Kauder, 64 Ridgevale Drive, was solemnized at Adath Israel Synagogue, on January 2, at half-past five o'clock, by Rabbi Erwin Schild, assisted by Cantor Morris Nissenbaum. The bride was given in marriage by her parents. She wore a white, silk, Empire gown. It was fashioned with an appliqued, lace bodice, with a round neckline, and long sleeves; and an A-line skirt, which finished in a train, covered with lace appliqued flowers. Her tulle illusion veil was shoulder-length; and attached to a circlet, covered with appliqued, lace flowers. She carried a bouquet of orchids and gardenias, trimmed with green ivy. Miss Rosalyn Lefler, sister of the bride, was maid of honour. She wore an emerald-green, brocaded, silk, two-piece gown; and had a matching headband, with a veil; and a bouquet of green-tinted and white carnations. Marvin Kauder, brother of the groom, was the best man. Irving Lefler, brother of the bride; Irving Rubinfeld and Irving Lefler, cousins of the bride; Ronald Sluser, cousin of the groom; Jeffrey Haberman, Allan Tobias and Lorne Banks, were ushers. Shawn and Jody Friesner, cousins of the groom, were junior ushers. The wedding decoration was of candelabra, and flowers. Three hundred and fifty guests were present. Mrs. Lefler, mother of the bride, wore a light-green, brocaded gown; with a jewelled neckline; and matching jewelled head-band; and an orchid wristlet. Mrs. Samuel Kauder, mother of the groom, wore a green and yellow chiffon gown; with a green beaded top; matching, beaded headpiece; and an orchid wristlet. Mrs. Dora Kauder, 157 Huron Street, grandmother of the groom, was in the wedding procession. She was escorted by William Sluser, uncle of the groom. She wore a blue, silk gown; matching accessories; and a pink rosebud corsage. Mr. and Mrs. Ronald David Kauder spent their wedding trip in Spain; the bride going away in a bright-pink, three-piece suit; with matching hat and accessories. They have taken up residence at 11 Goldfinch Court.

Israel Fur Industry To Exhibit At Fashion Week There

The rapidly expanding Israel fur industry will exhibit for the first time during the second annual Israel Fashion Week to be held February 21 through 25 at the new Tel-Aviv Hilton Hotel. Some 65 members of industry will exhibit their latest fashion ideas in broadtail, Persian lamb, mink and chinchilla to some 500 buyers and members of the press who will visit Israel for this fashion event. New fashions in furs will be seen in coats, stoles, jackets, suits, dresses, trim for fashion, hats, men's jackets, and even in fur undergarments!

This vital new fur industry, under the guidance of the fur division of the General Association of Merchants in Israel, also plans to take a national fur style show abroad to Europe during the summer of 1966. Fashion shows will be given in the principal cities on the continent, according to Daniel Barzilay, secretary of the Association.

Israel fur fashions and craftsmanship are based on the proven taste and long experience of Central and Eastern European-trained furriers who have immigrated to the young country. The fashion movement has also been aided recently by an influx of expert South American furriers from Buenos Aires, as well as a group from Rumania. Most of these, including about 20 South Americans, have opened their own workshops and stores, bringing new blood, talent, and energy to the field.

One of the brightest talents and the first Sabra (a native-born Israeli) to enter the fur fashion scene is Petach Tikvah, who is operating a highly successful studio and export business.

The export trade, incidentally, is the principal outlet for fur designers and craftsmen, as the weather, economy, and the informal social life mitigate against any extensive wearing of furs by local inhabitants.

Visitors to Israel, however, account for an important source of income. Fur houses are expertly set up to produce custom-styled fur coats to order within three days to a week. Thus a tourist on the shortest visit to Israel can have an individually styled coat ready to wear on departure.

LISTEN WITH MAMA

By Harold J. Miller, in the Liberal Jewish Monthly, of London, England

It is Friday Evening, and the candles in their silver holders on the white-clothed table echo redly the flickering illumination from the television screen in the far corner of the through-lounge. Supper is over, and the family has shifted automatically from one flicker to the other.

"You know, Hymie, I love this programme. It always makes me cry."

"Oh, mummy, you're so sentimental it isn't possible!"

"Leave your mother alone, Hilda," murmurs Hymie. "If it makes her happy to cry, let her cry."

"You should watch it, too, Hildele. That new consultant the sister keeps eyeing, he's a lovely fellow, 'e'n horra'. A fine Jewish face. Like your Uncle Morry, but without the moustache and the bald head, and younger, of course."

"You always say Morry doesn't look Jewish, dear," ventures Hymie.

"My own brother shouldn't be Jewish? Do I make such remarks about your family? Anyway, Hilda 'bubela', if you're not going to watch the television, be a good girl and do the washing-up for Mummy. You can leave it to drain, and daddy can give it a wipe-up later. After this is another lovely programme, and there isn't time in the commercials. And that nice, Jewish-looking man may be on with the haircream advert . . . You should use that cream, Hymie. By what he says, your hair won't stick up any more in the air. Then you wouldn't need always to wear a hat."

"I like wearing a hat, dear," mutters Hymie, not yet quite asleep.

"Mother, I can't do the washing-up now. I'm going out, and I've just done my nails."

"On Friday night you're going out? What's the matter with you, Hilda? You know on Shabbos we all sit together like one happy family and watch television or play cards or Monopoly or something. What's all of a sudden this going out? Rushing off to the West End to dance and I don't know what in a coffee bar as big as a broom cupboard, and as dirty. Coffee bars? didn't you once say they drink whisky there?"

Hilda's face looks a bit strained. "There is a coffee bar called 'Whisky-A-Go-Go', Mummy," she says patiently, "but that doesn't mean they sell whisky. But I wasn't going anywhere like that. Tony is coming round for me in about five minutes and we're going out for a walk in the park before it closes. I'll be back in an hour and a half."

"Tony? That doesn't sound Jewish. If you met a goy (Gentile) at that youth club I'm going straight up there to complain to that Mr. What's-his name. I'll tell the rabbi, even. They told me it was a Jewish —"

"Mother, please! Tony is Jewish and you've met him before. He called for me last Tuesday and you said how much you liked him."

"So I suppose I said he was a nice boy. I should be unpleasant about your friends? I never even looked at him. He didn't look Jewish, that's all."

"But if your never looked at him . . . Oh, mother, I — There's the bell. I'm going. See you later. 'Bye."

As she rushes gratefully to the door, her father stretches out a half-clenched hand. "If you're going out, Hilda, buy me a packet of cigarettes from the machine. Anything without tips."

For a little while, the only sounds in the room come from the

ADOLPH ZUKOR, FOUNDER OF A MOTION PICTURE EMPIRE, IS STILL IN THE KNOW, SALTY, KEEN, AND A SUCCESS AT 93

Adolph Zukor, retired chairman and still a director of Paramount Pictures Corporation, who celebrated his ninety-third birthday on January 7, forged a motion-picture empire almost fifty years ago that is going through the very kind of corporate struggle on which he himself used to thrive, writes Vincent Canby, in the New York Times. The chances are that he will outlive this battle too.

To survive the fortunes of daily living for ninety-three years is an achievement, but to survive that long, with reputation and fortune intact, in a business where careers are measured by seven-year options, gives Mr. Zukor an almost Pharaonic quality.

There is indeed a Pharaonic look about him now: small (five feet, five inches), lean, the skin taut around his forehead and eyes. It's a picture disturbed only by a big fat cigar and a still-piercing gaze that used to reduce bold screen sirens to weepy insecurity and helped earn him, behind his back, the nickname "Creepy."

The other day, on the eve of his departure for Hollywood, where he marked his birthday with his son, Eugene J. Zukor, and old friends, Mr. Zukor sat in his walnut-paneled office on the ninth floor of the Paramount Building and talked about his life, including the series of farewells cued by age. First he had to give up boxing, then tennis, and then, at seventy-five, golf. Two years ago he gave up his last exercise: a daily steam bath and massage.

"Today I sit," he said. He reads newspapers and news magazines, watches television news shows, and spends six hours a day at the office, where he attends advertising and sales sessions and meetings of the board of directors.

"I occasionally give them advice —for what its worth," he says. It is clear that he doesn't consider himself to have "grown narrative with age."

Mr. Zukor gave the American film industry its direction in 1912, when he introduced the feature film concept with Sarah Bernhardt's, "Queen Elizabeth." He shaped its structure in 1916, when he bulldozed together the first integrated production-distribution-exhibition combination, says the New York Times. Thus he is not in the least appalled by possible radical changes in the film industry of the future.

Pay television is inevitable, Mr. Zukor feels, and he will welcome it. Paramount has a substantial investment in the Telemeter pay-TV system. He dismisses criticisms that today's films of sex and violence are leading to a breakdown in the nation's morals.

"It takes two years to get a film on the screen. Films do not set trends. They follow them."

He shrugs at the mention of the million-dollar salaries paid some stars in recent years.

"These things go in cycles. The latest fashion is a profit participation deal." He himself started one such cycle back in 1914 when he agreed to pay Mary Pickford, who was as shrewd at the bargaining table as he, the then-staggering annual salary of $104,000, plus fringe benefits.

Mr. Zukor is proudest of his ability to pick top screen talent—"those prominent people we call stars." He ticks off names: "Marguerite Clark, Jack Barrymore, Pola Negri; that lady with the beautiful legs . . . What's her name? . . . she's still around . . ." (Marlene Dietrich.)

Mr. Zukor, who was succeeded as Paramount president in 1935 by Barney Balaban, remained chairman until two years ago. A widower since 1956, he has an apartment in midtown Manhattan and spends four months of the year on the Coast.

Living in the same Manhattan building, and keeping an eye on him, is his daughter, Mrs. Mildred Loew, divorced wife of Arthur Loew, former president of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and son of Mr. Zukor's onetime partner and later rival, the late Marcus Loew. Mr. Zukor also has five grandchildren, including the film producer, Arthur Loew, Jr.

Mr. Zukor may be the only Paramount executive today who views with equanimity the current struggle for company control being waged by two dissident directors, Herbert J. Seigel and Ernest Martin, says the New York Times. Perhaps remembering his own wheeling and dealing that resulted in the formation of Paramount with himself in charge in 1916, Mr. Zukor says:

"It's a dream (to control a company) and many dreams come true. Some do not."

The immigrant boy from Hungary, who arrived at fifteen with $25 in his pocket, can now take the long view:

"Such (corporate) changes may or may not be healthy, but the entertainment world is kept alive by change."

Head Of Orthodox Union Scores Lavish Funerals

The president of the Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations of America sharply criticized "lavish floral displays and unholy musical extravaganzas" that violate the sanctity of funeral ceremonies. Moses I. Feuerstein, head of the organization that represents some 3,000 synagogues in the United States and Canada, reports George Dugan, in the New York Times, said in a statement that many Jewish funerals were violating the canons of dignity and religious ritual.

"A funeral," he declared, "is a deeply meaningful religious function. To do honor to the deceased with traditional appropriateness, it must comply with the standards of dignity, sanctity, and modesty of a solemn religious service."

Mr. Feuerstein elaborated further in an interview. He said flowers and music at "such a time" were contrary to Jewish law.

"Judaism," he said, "prescribes specific ritual procedures, from death to interment, requiring competent religious guidance. Public viewing is contrary to Jewish law which considers such practice a desecration. Humility and decorum should give expression to the fact that the funeral is a most solemn ritual of holy importance."

Rabbi Bernard Twersky, information officer of the Rabbinical Council of America, said that his organization gave unqualified endorsement to Mr. Feuerstein's statement.

Last summer, the Synagogue Council of America adopted a statement similar to the one just issued by Mr. Feuerstein. The Council represents the Reform, Conservative, and Orthodox branches of American Judaism.
